Burial Register of the Jewish Cemetery Kriegshaber (Pfersee) in Augsburg

ca. 1948 (private)

In extant documents the Cemetery for the first time is mentioned in 1626 (the plaque at the former Tahara and keepers house which is a postwar replacement of an older one erroneously states 1636), but probably is older. A complete documentation of the Jewish Cemetery of Pfersee and Kriegshaber, usually referred to as “Kriegshaber Cemetery” at Hoover Str. 15 (formerly Hummelstr. 80) is not possible.

The present burial list of the Jewish cemetery which is not intended to be exhaustive was compiled in winter/spring 2007/08 under adverse circumstances and inevitably contains mistakes. Although it made use of several older only partial depictions of different segments, sketches and photographs, it is the first one which covers the whole area of the present cemetery. However, beside decades long neglect, it faces a number of unsolved difficulties:

1. According to records quoted by Louis Lamm in 1912 there are some 450 – 500 burials in the time from 1646 until 1705 which are not part of the walled-in area. The unknown burial places are most likely beyond the western wall of the present cemetery.
2. In 1722 the newly built Tahara and keeper house and a high number of tombstones were destroyed.
3. From 1806 until 1864 next to the north-eastern wall the Bavarian Army established a huge bullet trap hill for gunnery exercises . Time and again cannon balls destroyed grave markers at the cemetery or hurt visitors as well as (Christian) passerby.
4. During the Nazi rule a number of grave markers were destroyed. After the war, Swabian stonemasons pieced together some of them to a monument next to the entrance, in most cases with the inscription to the inside.
5. At the cemetery there still are a number of heavy overthrown tomb stones which may not be turned over without professional equipment by experts, for what reason their likely preserved inscriptions can't be verified so far. The same applies to parts of the cemetery covered by ivy which may conceal further fragments.

6. In early 1950s a dozen other grave markers and remnants mosaic-like were pieced together as grounding of a small garden shed, pulled down in 2005 and overgrown afterwards. Among the grave markers, discovered in fall 2007 there also is a prominent one photographed in Theo Harburger's 1927 photo collection.

7. Also after the war at least 10 burials of so called "displaced persons" took place at the cemetery without grave marker.

8. Next to the former Tahara and keepers house there are two tool sheds which in the early 1980s were established on actual grave sites, whose markers partly are identifiable on photographs until 1980.

Sources:

Handwritten records from Moritz Mayer (from 1855 – 1905 teacher and chazzan in Kriegshaber); Wolf Krailsheimer (1806-1883), teacher in Pfersee; Leopold Regensburger (1867-1931), teacher in Kriegshaber; Louis Lamm (Die Juedischen Friedhoeje in Kriegshaber, Buttenwiesen and Binswangen, printed in 1912), Theo Harburger (1927, see CAHJP / P 160a 101), Hermann Felber Sen. (keeper from 1927 to 1956) from 1940/41 known as copied document "RSA J 1758" (from the Nazi authority "Reichssippenamt"); Felber sketch book and sheets, many old photographs from 1920s until 1990s (archive and private); photographs and several notes and sketches on uncategorized sheets in folders from the estate box of Dr. Louis Duerrwanger (ca. 1930s) at Augsburg Stadtarchiv; exchange on particular information of names and burials of displaced persons from the present Archive of the Jewish Community in Augsburg (Vladimir Razoumny, Vladislav Shaykhit); database collection from "Standesregister" <http://igbs.org/>; inscriptions and fragments from the cemetery (2007-09); genealogical records in several family sheets by Rolf Hofmann (www.alemannia-judaica.de/harburgproject.htm); several newspaper articles, and genealogical records from rabbinical writings, compiled by Yehuda Schenef from the JHVA (www.jhva.de)

The current list follows the order of Mayer and Regensburger and is from east to west in the older part and in chronology from west to east in the separated newer part in the norther-western corner of the cemetery. The numeration bases on the known grave markers or grave sites. Further findings or knowledge therefore cannot be ruled out at present stage, but may change the succession in particular rows. Approx. there was space used for some 25 grave markers in each of the 43 rows (what would add up to some 1100 burials), which however run not even. Harburger (who used a different order from west to east) recorded 298 identifiable grave markers in 1927 in the older part of the cemetery only. For better traceability his numbers are mentioned as "h 298" to "h 1" ("H-List", h for Harburger). However, Harburger has not recorded the newer part of the cemetery, noted in our list with the abbreviation "n" for "new".

Please note: Most grave marker inscriptions are entirely in Hebrew. From about 1840 some also have German additions. Before early 19th century there were no family names in our contemporary understanding. Therefore also spellings differ. Almost all grave markers at the cemetery are at least slightly damaged, the vast majority however severely.
